As it approaches its 60th anniversary next year, Boyd & Jenerette PA is also celebrating the opening of a new Miami office and a 41.64 percent average annual revenue increase from 2008 to 2010.

Glen McClary, the firm's managing partner, said he has seen accelerated growth and development over the past six years, due to general business growth, and what he calls "organic growth."

In addition to maintaining the firm's reputation of quality advising and service, the group has expanded into other practice areas that open up new opportunities for the attorneys.

The firm recently entered the field of international law, which McClary said will expand with the opening of the new office in Miami and an expansion into South Florida. He has also seen an uptick in business in areas such as commercial litigation, insurance coverage issues, contract disputes and construction law.

"Ultimately it comes down to delivering a service that the client desires," McClary said.

Claude Revels, safety director at JM Family Enterprises Inc. , has worked with Boyd and Jenerette for about 20 years. The firm has helped with worker's compensation cases. Revels said he appreciates that the firm specializes in different fields, so he can always go to someone at the firm with a question.

"I can't see myself working with anybody other than them, at least from a worker's comp standpoint," Revels said. "They've got a little bit of everything and I was glad to see that."
